Still, protests may force GMA to quit, says Cory

By Allan R. Lopez and Joseph B. Uy

FORMER PRESIDENT CORAZON AQUINO YES today told Pilgrims to prepare for a "long" fight, but said that in the end the public protest against corruption could force President Macapagal-Arroyo to resign.

Aquino spoke at a Mass at University of Santo Tomas, which was attended by former vice president Noli de la Torre Jr., who spoke of the growing disillusion of some Church leaders to his appeals on alleged kickbacks in the $229-million Northwood (NBN) deal with China's ZTE Corp.

At a separate event, former President Fidel Ramos said that despite Friday's rally in Manila City, in which thousands of protesters called for Mr. Arroyo's resignation, "we will have a long way to go."

Ramos' remarks were carried on the website of the ABS-CBN network.

Quinsido, in an interview, named President Joseph Estrada as expected critic of his presence in the Manila rally and said that those involved in the anti-Arroyo campaign would not have been able to muster

4 senators push probe of SouthRail project

By GE. Cabacungan Jr. and Tiller Burgos

THE SENATE'S BLUE BIRD committee has set in motion a probe of the $192-million South Rail project (SouthRail) project despite calls from at least four senators in the so-called Richard's Luzon. It is alleged that the project was approved because of kickbacks.

"Our senators don't make any investigation. In SouthRail, we have a witness in Mr. Luzon, but why will he say and where it will lead to the head of the committee," said Sen. Alan

Three Capriles, chair of the blue ribbon committee, the last panel investigating the alleged $229-million National Broadband Network (NBN) deal with ZTE Corp.

Among the senators calling for a probe of the SouthRail project are Padilla Larena, Manuel Irujo Jr., Josey Mollano and Rodolfo Biazon.

In his first statement on the NBN-ITC deal in the Senate on Feb. 8, Luzon said that a certain Antonio Huang and a "Mr. Mañal" were the "broker" of the SouthRail project, which he said was overpriced by at least 20 percent. (See "In the know" on page A6.)

Luzon was referring to former Commission on Elections Chair Benjamin Abalos Jr., who was said to have endorsed the NBN-ITC deal and donated $100,000 to Padilla for

Gringo: It could be bloody this time

Ex-coup leader warns against wishing for military intervention to oust GMA

By EDC Calasagaja

SEN. GREGORIO "GRINGO" HONASAN, ONE OF THE INSTIGATORS of the 1986 military ouster that sparked the first EDSA revolution, has cautioned anti-Arroyo forces not to be too rash in seeking military intervention, saying "It could be bloody, unlike the first two people power revolts."

Honasan, a former rebel and founder of the rebel Hukbong to Masad (HUKMAS), said yesterday he was bothered by the transparency of the leaders of the protest rally he is calling for the military to intervene and over 500 assembled—said: "The most important thing is that we should not divide the military."

"Do not expect the military and the police to abandon the administration entirely if you do get some forces, you will have the only legally armed group in the country" warned Honasan, who was granted amnesty for his rebellion just during the term of President Fidel Ramos and went on to win a senatorial seat in 2001 and 2005.

Honasan went into hiding again in 2006 after he was implicated in the 2003 Duterte slaying but the charges against him were dropped by the government shortly before the May 2007 midterm elections, when he ran for senator and lost as an "Independent."

"He said he was against another constitutional amendment more he changed. The three existing military are just willing to take responsibility as a case of an armed confrontation if it becomes bloody whether or not it is or not, are you all going to stand in the front lines for your beliefs, at all costs, tonight for the cause?"

Honasan said this was the reason he had been quiet when asked to comment on the call for President Arroyo's ouster over corruption allegations.

"I'm not hesitating to make any declaration whether for or against because I am not ready to take responsibility for what I will say. What I say contains just my opinion," he said.

"I'm not taking any responsibility for 1986. We thought we'd do our duty and we would have an ideal government and fair system. It was managed but what happened after was chaos."

Honasan cautioned today's anti-Arroyo rally to be more moderate than the 1986 one, but also reminded it to be the will of the people and not just a

Help us file cases, UNO urges those barred from rally

By Desires Calasagaja

AGOSTO 28 (Pinar) — The UNITED NATIONS has urged people who were stopped by police and soldiers from attending the July 29 anti-Arroyo rally in Manila City to submit affidavits so that it could file appropriate charges against the government.

UNO spokesperson said Honasan, who will head the legal team that will study the cases, wanted the government not to be involved in filing the cases on the basis of the protesters.

"I want to see any government, threatened with the right to file charges against the government, that it could file appropriate charges against the government," Honasan said.

Honasan said he was not sure if the government would file charges against the protesters, but he was sure that the government would file charges against the protesters.

"I want to see any government, threatened with the right to file charges against the government, that it could file appropriate charges against the government," Honasan said.

Earlier last week, the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines called on Msgr. Reyes to resign EO 464 and allow all concerned officials to participate in investigations on the headboard scandal.

Mutually assured destruction

Manila. Msgr. Lourdes Aquino Pineda said she and the bishops should show "good faith" and bend the "GMA" will.

Pineda said that was what she was asked to speak about his former's position in his resignation. Msgr. Reyes' Commission on Elections Chairperson Abalos had offered Msgr. Reyes to resign the EO 464 project because of the threat of being fired and that for his life.

"The President is using mutually assured destruction tactic to keep both sides from the Senate," Pineda said.

Sen. Manuel Roxas II and Msgr. Reyes should agree that, when in new chair of the Commission on Higher Education, to return to the Senate because this was the only response to the swirling, swirling against her administration is re-negotiating.

Save Bulacan trees from ax, Atienza urged

By Joseph R. Uy

"MR. ATIENZA, SAVE THESE TREES!"
This was the call of an environmentalist group yesterday to Environment Secretary Luis Atienza as they urged him to save hundreds of decades-old trees along MacArthur Highway in Bulacan from the chainsaw.

The Bulacan Kalayaan Movement (BKM) appealed to Atienza to revoke the permit for the Environment Secretary Angelo Boco, now the energy secretary, issued last year to the Department of Public Works and Highways allowing the chipping down of EHR trees along a stretch of the highway from San Jose to Calumpit town to make way for a road widening project.

"Atienza Boco left the DENR (Department of Environment and Natural Resources), he reminded him of his Greening the Philippine Highways and Trees for Life program as we urged him to revoke the permit, so to speak," said BKM president Joey Papa.

The BKM had sought a temporary restraining order from the Makiling Regional Trial Court to stop the enforcement of the permit for their petition not to demolish, Papa said.

He said a former president of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines-Bulacan chapter, lawyer Jose de la Rana, would file another petition for a TRO, "nonetheless, denials will continue to fall unless Atienza steps in to revoke the order."

"We hope Secretary Atienza will lend our voice," he said, stressing the importance of reviving the environment.

"No experts worried last year, there are only nine years left for governments and people to do something dramatic to mitigate extreme climate changes... yet certain authorities continue to be so cautious, to say the least," Papa said.

DepEd: Keep graduation rites simple

By Kristine L. Alvar

KEEP IT SIMPLE:

The Department of Education (DepEd) yesterday reminded heads of public schools and teachers to observe austerity in graduation rites.

Education Secretary Jodi Lapina said all principals were prohibited from asking for financial contributions from the parents of graduating students.

"We are reminding our principals to refrain from collecting any kind of fee for graduation rites, or from holding extravagant graduation rites in extraordinary venues," Lapina said in a memorandum dated Feb. 20.

"This is part of our austerity measures, so as not to financially burden the parents, who are looking forward to this important event in their children's lives," he said.

Lapina also reminded principals and teachers that commencement exercises should be conducted solemnly and should not be used as a venue for political rallies.

The DepEd's order prohibits the collection of fees for graduation rites, the submission of reports of non-academic projects as requirements for graduation, and collecting any voluntary contributions for projects.

If the school needs to solicit funds for the rites, the project should be handled by the PTA and Teachers' Community Association (PTCA), Lapina said.

"The PTCA may solicit voluntary contributions for graduation ceremonies from members, but teachers and principals should not be involved in the collection of these contributions," he said.

Duterte: I didn't ask GMA to quit

DENIED IT: MAYOR RODRIGO DUTERTE yesterday denied reports he had asked Presidential Magangal Duterte to step down.

"I never said that," Duterte said over his Sunday television program here.

Duterte was an opposition politician before he became an ally of his former.

The reports arose after over the radio, were presented by Duterte's attorney during his lawyer's two trials under Duterte's region III post.

In his television program, Duterte explained that he raised the President's two trials because he was on vacation both times.

"I was not there because I was on vacation," he said.

Pressed on his stand in the ZTE-NBN controversy bouding the President, Duterte said he would rather wait for the results of the investigation being conducted, including the Senate inquiry.

"When I was in my office, my legal secretary went to you—last night President or anybody. My decision will be for you. What I will say in the next few days is based on what I know in the state... and I will do accordingly," he said.

But while asking for his attorneys for the President, Duterte said he was not withdrawing his.

"There is no need to defend him. If he is telling the truth, what is there to defend?" Duterte said. Dennis Limones, Charly Guevarra and Jeffrey Tapas, Mindanao Duterte

"We have serious problems at the Hubco," said Dennis Uy, governor of Compostela Valley province. "Nine years ago there was a plan to put up a tailings dam, but I do not know what happened to the funding."

A 1995 study funded by the United Nations found marked mercury contamination of water in three times over the safe limit for the river, streams and fish harvested from the Hubco, or from triggered by its waste.

The Institute for Future Medicine of University of London, Macmillan University also found high levels of mercury contamination in the area.

'Shedder'

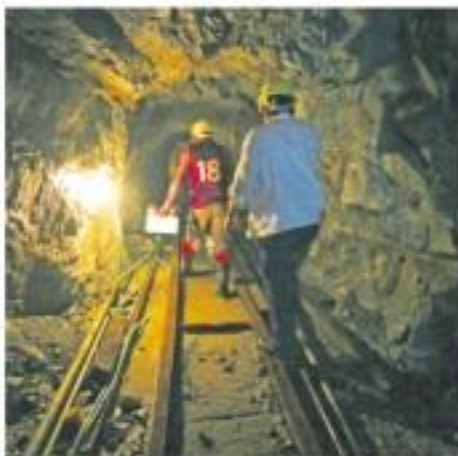

Farmers began poured into the area after September 1992, when a Mindanao tribal elder first pointed the yellow metal on the Hubco River. They promptly hospitalized the farmer's name to "shedder," along that refers to volcanic ash all to hard work (losing) labor through each on the mountainside.

Army exec changes tune on Sulu killings report

Illegal fishing back in Tayabas Bay, group says

LEGASPI CITY—AN ENVIRONMENTAL group has expressed alarm over the resurgence of illegal commercial fishing in the Tayabas Bay, threatening again the overfished fish stocks of endangered marine species and the livelihood of poor fishers.

"The return of commercial fishing activities impacts the highest prospect of the bay as an emerging safe refuge of threatened marine species," says Rufus, coastal and marine program officer of Tagalog Resource (TRA), a public environmental legal defense group, told the business on Tuesday.

The group said the resurgence of illegal commercial fishing could once more deprive the small fishermen of their share of the marine resources.

A composite area of provincial environment officials, police, volunteers and civil organizations campaign against commercial fishing vessels inside the national waters of Philippine Islands and Legaspi Bay.

The TRA also has been actively fishing near the shore of Sulu Bay in Negros, Philippines.

Another report, the FAO Global Fish, reportedly issued by Philip Magallanes, based in Manila, Philippine Fisheries Service, was caught near the area.

The Philippine Code of 1998 (Republic Act No. 8534) prohibits commercial fishing vessels from operating within 12 nautical miles of territorial waters.

The apprehended vessels were arrested in the Philippine coast.

Arrested were Gaby Tabara, boat captain, and Elvin Reyes, master fisherman, both of the Adnan Reyes, master fisherman, boat captain, and Joel Lim, master fisherman of the Gloria 86.

The arrest was based on the fact that the fisherman were using fish traps, which is banned under Sections 89 and 90 of the Philippine Code. (Johannes T. Malinao, Jr., Legaspi Southern Star)

DepEd relaunches program to reduce illiteracy

By Joy A. Calines
Bureau Staff

MANILA CITY—THE GOVERNMENT school system is launching by half the country's literacy rate by 2015 as it encourages both the local government and the private sector to help in the undertaking.

The 2015 target was set under the United Nations Millennium Development Goal.

While the goal is, consistent of the Literacy Coordinating Council, an attached agency of the Department of Education, said the LCC re-launched the National Literacy Award and tested all LGUs and the private sector to come up with programs and projects to split the literacy rates in their areas.

The 2003 Functional Literacy Education and Skills Training Survey (FLESTES) conducted by the National Statistics Office shows that the literacy rate in the country stood at 15.5 percent, which means that about 4.29 million Filipinos did not know how to read and write.

Another FLESTES, which is conducted every five years, will be held in November, she said.

But she said the DepEd would also be actively to eliminate learning education system that provided for an education to out of school youths.

The DepEd has assigned mobile teachers to areas with high literacy rate as they could reach young people or out of school youths, using modules in math, science, English and Filipino that the DepEd has with regular modules.

In Zamboanga, about 1,500 out of school youths are enrolled in the alternative learning education system, and in the Sultan, chief of the provincial the DepEd regional office.

"We are focusing on the Sulu Islands where there are no schools as far as the province of high literacy rate," she said.

Each year, DepEd has one of the highest literacy rates at 21 percent based on the 2003 survey. Poverty, remoteness and poor nutrition were among the factors cited by the LCC for the high literacy rate.

ZAMBOANGA CITY—THE MILITARY trainers said the report about the deaths of eight people, including two children and a pregnant woman in Zamboanga, Sulu, that it released last month was not yet final.

In a family conducted press conference last 12 Oct., Sulu, Sulu, chief of the Western Mindanao Command, said the report only covered the initial investigation and that the military had never closed those involved.

The eight victims, one of them a civilian, were reportedly killed by the military and deliberately killed, according to residents.

In response, the military's Inspector General (IG) and the operations conducted by the Sulu Regional Bureau and the 13th Cavalry Light Battalion Co. in Zamboanga last 12 Oct. were legitimate.

"The military operation was a legitimate counterterrorism measure of the state and the government troops," he said.

Sulu Gov. Abdurrahman Tawil said the findings had absolved the soldiers involved in the massacre.

"The reports coming out were false, false," he added, stating they were based on the military's report.

The report triggered strong anti-state and human rights groups.

A Moss human rights group based in Cambridge City, Mass. said it was submitting the report before the United Nations Human Rights Council (2009).

But said the big number of civilian casualties during the war was unacceptable.

But Aliaga said the soldiers took as much as when they conducted the operation against the MILF in the area.

"The military operation was not a counterterrorism measure but a military operation to eliminate the MILF," he said.

Aliaga also said two of the reported civilian killed were actually Abu Sayyaf members, Abu Sayyaf and Abu Sayyaf. Sayyaf was a village commander of the Abu Sayyaf.

Charles Chong of the United Nations said he had received reports that the military was trying to bring the families of some of the victims to the area to claim the compensation. (Johannes T. Malinao, Jr., Legaspi Southern Star) enough women leaders without the help of her political figure like himself.

"I don't want to discourage you but it appears it may take a longer time because we have not awakened those consciousness of ours who seem to be fighting sleep."

"Still I am not losing hope. If we were able to achieve education, surely it would be easier for us now because there is no mental lag and I hope we will have mental lag."

Mr. Arroyo cited legal counsel, Sergio Aquino, and said the President was confident but opponents would not drive enough people to the streets to oust her.

Wearing a bright yellow scarf... her signature color and also the color of US... Aquino renewed a standing ovation before the speech.

She asked for patience and stressed that she would not abandon Lunsad, who had helped her Arroyo and her husband, Jose Miguel Arroyo, to the second round of the 2004 election.

"She, just a little bit more, just a little more, harding," said Aquino, who came to power in 1986 after a popular uprising toppled Ferdinand Marcos.

"If not for you, Am, only a few would have been about what is really happening in our government," she added.

Geopolitical concerns

In his speech, Lunsad said a point "Vice to the contrary" but said here that he would have had "the problem" of Lunsad's presence in a meeting here in the United States and the Philippines in 1986 after a popular uprising toppled Ferdinand Marcos.

"The told me (that) the methods and techniques are now needed of political activities because some Lunsad's concerns are about the fact that the Philippines is in a situation where it is not a free country."

Behind Aquino, Lunsad said, "I replied, Father if you're telling me now that the Church where I work refuge is being nullified to the state and justice but because of your own geopolitical considerations, then, you have to work on the grounds of the border, all the things during, all those dreams that you had fought an action, because I have to recognize my faith if that is how you will answer me."

What UST means

Lunsad came to the church meeting a black T-shirt with the words "We are UST (United in Love) for the Truth."

A 100,000 engineering graduates, Lunsad was welcomed back "home" with an ovation in the business house church before he spoke to the 1,000 people who had gathered outside the church.

The show was led by UST senior Fr. Francisco de la Cruz O.S.A.

Among those who attended were Manila Mayor Alfredo Lim, Association of Member Religious Superiors of the Philippines Dean St. Mary John Macatangay, De La Salle University president Fr. Jerome Lunsad O.S.A., Ateneo University president Fr. Greg Bernal, former Cabinet secretary Danilo Lunsad and Francisco Lunsad, and former speaker Jose de Rivera's wife, Gina.

Extrajudicial supporters

Lunsad defended his presence on the stage at the Feb. 29 anniversary rally in Manila, which was organized by some supporters.

"The (Lunsad) has been following his vision that is the symbol of democracy, being a human person, too, I still have my own following and I can show more people than Lunsad's and my support," he said.

Lunsad was referring to the leaders of the Black and White Movement and the Council of Philippine Affairs, respectively.

"I am very sure that without the religious order which has a national council and without the help of political personalities, I, myself, have been able to do this," he said, adding that he was not a politician.

Ramon urges caution

Ramon, who stood as one of the godfathers in the wedding of retired Philippine National Police Director General Antonio Lunsad and Jody Fiu at the Manila Cathedral on Monday, said the Manila rally was beginning.

But Ramon added, "We must not jump in any conclusion just because it was recently held. There was a lot of energy but if you're looking at previous people power events that were successful, nothing is happening. I think we are just beginning."

Ramon was referring to the Feb. 1 and 2 events that resulted in the ouster of Marcos in 1986 and of Estrada in 2001.

"We are still (not) done. We still have a long way to go. I hope you know in the history of all about the truth," he said, according to the ABS-CBN network.

Mr. Arroyo was also expected at the event, but he left after the ceremonies.

Fr. de la Cruz gave a different view of people power in his homily at UST.

"We believe ourselves if we think that by removing the President, Jose Macatangay, just as we did with Marcos and Estrada, integrity and honesty will be restored," he said.

He also said, "We must stop looking for supporters in our brother, our girls, but we must have a position. We must have them in just one person or a group of persons who can take the best of ourselves."

Fr. de la Cruz said it was a "dangerous misunderstanding" to single out moral bankruptcy in the government while not looking at our own.

An official of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines said Lunsad should not lead the rally's support for him.

"The bishops in general, were perhaps for some support Lunsad," General Fr. Bishop Gregorio Villegas, CBCP public affairs chief, said on the phone.

He added, "In fact, Lunsad was one of the influences why the CBCP's statement on the 2004 election was so strong."

Lunsad said there were various ways the bishops could show their support for Lunsad, including meeting and contacting him.

"Maybe he is just expecting other means of encouragement, that's why he is disappointed," Lunsad said. With a report from Marjorie C. Ortiz.

MMDA offers amnesty to PUV drivers

Last call for those with unsettled traffic fines dating back to '95

By Ed Ng

DRIVERS OF PASSENGER JEEPNEYS, BUSES and taxis with unsettled traffic fines dating back to the mid-'90s have until the last week of March to apply for amnesty, the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority said yesterday.

In a scheme that could lead to the lifting of thousands of cases in flow stopped on the lanes, the agency is offering amnesty to drivers of all passenger vehicles, except private and buses, with accumulated traffic violation records from 1995 to Feb. 11, 2008.

"That is good news for auto drivers who have accumulated fines amounting to P20,000," said MMDA General Manager Robert Placenciano.

Conditional amnesty

The amnesty, however, does not apply to administrative or license law dating without a license, operating a "redneck" vehicle, those without a license and vehicles covered by the law, Placenciano added.

It only covers moving violations such as disregarding red light signs, illegal counterflow and reckless driving, he said.

Those who wish to avail of the amnesty must apply at the MMDA office in Quezon City, where it is located.

They must pay the current equivalent to the lowest fine imposed on them but without the additional penalty for late payment.

They will also be required to undergo a seminar on traffic rules and policies, Placenciano said.

Computerized system

MMDA Chief Legal Counsel said the agency would do well to avail themselves of the amnesty, considering the agency's system of identifying vehicles with unsettled traffic fines.

"Since we began using computers, we were having an efficient system in which all those caught by our traffic violators with unpaid fines can be identified with just one key stroke," Placenciano said.

At the same time, he pointed out that the amnesty should be a means for drivers to take traffic rules for granted. "Unsettled traffic violations have the risk of having their drivers' licenses suspended, he warned.

Arson eyed in 11-hour QC fire; 3 persons hurt

By Mark Rancie

ARSON INVESTIGATIONS ARE UNDERWAY into the possibility that an 11-hour fire which left three persons wounded and destroyed two warehouses and an industrial house in New Manila, Quezon City, was deliberately set off.

The incident happened on March 3, the last day of the Prevention Month.

"This could be an arson case and not just an accidental fire incident," Insp. Arnel Bantillo, deputy chief of the Quezon City Fire Department, told the Inquirer.

He refused, however, to give further details of the ongoing investigation.

Bantillo identified those wounded in the fire as YD0 Y0 Dagupan, a fireman assigned to the La Loma fire station; Gary Villapando, a volunteer fireman from the Tanjay Fire Brigade and John Oo, the owner of one of the houses which burned down.

Triagage officers took to the hospital about 100 people injured by the blaze.

Bantillo estimated the damage to property at about P10 million.

He said the fire broke out at 7:30 p.m.

Incident within a compound owned by Jewelina Cardillo at 7 Delya De Salazar St., Barangay Malibon.

Bantillo received multiple reports within the fire started inside a textile factory under construction.

The factory actually came from a warehouse owned by Delya Cardillo. It was located inside her two-story house. She said she did not see any signs of persons in the fire wreckage, he said.

Bantillo added that the fire quickly spread to Cardillo's house and another warehouse containing plastic ribbons, also within the compound.

Witnesses found it difficult to see the fire as the initially and plastic ribbons, both highly flammable items, were placed all around the burning and which grew fast.

It took about five hours before they were able to contain the fire under control, Bantillo said.

He added that it was already 6:44 a.m. yesterday when they finally put out the fire with the help of 75 firemen and 12 fire trucks from the QCFD and volunteer fire brigades.

DID YOU KNOW

AMONG the country's regions, Metro Manila had the second highest number of deaths in 2007 (about 16,000). Of this number, 34,000 were male and 24,000 were female. Southern Tagalog had the highest mortality with 24,000 deaths, while the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao had the lowest (11,000). There were nearly 200,000 deaths in the Philippines in 2007.

Birds find nesting place in Valenzuela City

By Nancy C. Cervajal

A TWO-HECTARE LOT WHICH more than 100 species of migratory birds have nested here during the past season will soon become one of Valenzuela City's natural heritage sites.

The city government earlier declared a nesting area in Villa Fontanillo, Malabon, which is surrounded by water and nesting with water lilies, a bird sanctuary.

Residents said the birds, which are from Malabon, are nesting to reproduce, have been nesting in the area for more than five years, prompting Mayor Herminio Galante to sign a proclamation of agreement with the owners of the property for its development into a park.

"The landscape in the area will not be touched but it will be developed into a lake and wildlife sanctuary," Galante said.

He said he was mostly about 100 to 150 birds of species around in the two-hectare property.

The city government said it would coordinate with national and regional bird clubs, the Wild Bird Club of the Philippines, Malabon and Malabon in bird-feeding activities.

One of the species that has been spotted is the white heron, a bird that is known as a black-crowned night heron.

Galante said waterfowl view birds will be built around the area for the convenience of bird watchers.

"The birds will be used to the nesting to give people a good nesting point without disturbing the birds," he said.

But if all the waterfowl are nesting in Galante, will be open to the public for bird watching.

"We want to protect the birds and at the same time provide exposure to residents and visitors," he said.

The sanctuary, which is just an hour's drive away from Manila City, will also be used for students going on field trips. "The sanctuary is also used for school, but only to observe," Galante said.

More than 100 species of birds live in a two-hectare lot in Malabon.

According to residents, the birds probably flock to the area, which used to be a rice field, because they can find food there.

"We see them fly low and they make the water lilies and rice there for a while, probably to look for food," a man observed.

He added that whenever birds showed in the area during the nesting season, they are most active from 4 p.m. until sunset.

For instance, the black-crowned night heron is the most common.

"According to experts, our tropical climate is conducive to nesting, breeding and feeding," he said.

Residents who live near the nesting area said that at first, the sounds made by them were just background noise, but then they grew to be a nuisance.

"They started nesting one day and have been nesting since then," he said.

Galante said he has the best "nesting view" of the birds of any resident in the area, adding that he has a view of the birds from a hill of about eight meters high.

He said he has a view of the birds from a hill of about eight meters high.

At anytime, there remain in the area of 100 birds, with 50 birds nesting in the area.

According to residents in the area, the best time for birdwatching is from 4 p.m. until sunset.

Valenzuela City Mayor Herminio Galante hopes the two-hectare lot will attract both birds and foreigners to the city.

Chinese tire dealer files complaint vs compatriots

By Marko Ruman

A CHINESE BUSINESSMAN yesterday asked the police for help in getting away from his compatriots who allegedly failed to pay him P4.4 million worth of tires.

Huang Hong Ping, 40, also known as Gao, filed a complaint with the Quezon City Police District's Criminal Investigation and Investigation Unit at the Camp Crame, Quezon City, to file a complaint against three Chinese businessmen Richard Uy and Philip Uy.

In his affidavit, Huang said Uy said he was able to recover from two months ago to supply him with rubber tires of different types and sizes.

Tire deliveries

Said, manager of the New Century Tire Marketing Corp., said he ordered his men to deliver the tires to Uy's Typhoon Tire and Accessories shop at 10011 De A. Santos Ave., Barangay San Dominico, Pasig City.

He said he said his men also delivered tires to Uy's 700's Street Shop, now located at 1555 Quezon Ave., Quezon City.

Bank accounts closed

"When he deposited the checks in his bank account, Huang found out that the bank had rejected his checks and he was forced to close the accounts," he said.

Huang said that after he contacted the suspects, they asked him to send them some more tires.

Raising checks

But just like the other checks given to him, the new checks were rejected, prompting him to seek police assistance.

POL. 2nd District, said he was not sure if the suspects had the money to pay him. He said he was not sure if the suspects had the money to pay him.

Real Spicy super hot, scorches field by five lengths

By Huong K. Canillo

SPICY 40-0000.
Races here Real Spicy leader line as the five-time champ changed a chesty field to riding the Philippine Commission Cup by five lengths over hapless Maribato yesterday at the Santa Mesa Park in Manila.

The victory was the third in a row in stakes races for Real Spicy.

Stakes splendidly by the Pambayok Jockeys, the six-year-old son of Real Spicy won the Pambayok Jockeys Cup by five lengths over hapless Maribato yesterday at the Santa Mesa Park in Manila.

The victory was the third in a row in stakes races for Real Spicy.

middle of the pack before making his winning move.

The 2006 Horse of the Year dived on with some effort, picking off Maribato and LRT Magic before pulling away from the chasing crowd to lock one minute and 22.4 seconds, break down in 14.32, 25, 25, 26 over 1,000 meters.

That was just six-tenths of a second slower than the record he set over with imperial charger Wile O'Clock, and even if he was fighting a coughing fit, it was a major change he implemented at the start of the year.

Real Spicy is now being trained by Steven Hernandez, a move criticized by many at the start but now seems to be paying off.

"I definitely see it more material than in 2006," Hernandez said. The trainer, "That year, he was dominant because he had youth on his side. Now he has control and his mind more developed compared to before he was dominant."

Manila, the city's former Triple Crown property who was defeated by Antonio Abad, slipped Maribato and Real Spicy for second spot.

PhilCycling heeds PSC decision to hold fund

THE PHILIPPINE CYCLING FEDERATION reports the decision of the Philippine Sports Commission regarding all financial matters to the commission pending the completion of investigations on alleged irregularities in the procurement of bicycle equipment.

PhilCycling president Benito said it is only important for the PSC, the government sports agency, to decide on the suspension because public funds were used in the purchase of the equipment which were used in last year's 24th Southeast Asian Games in Thailand.

It heard 40 cases of alleged irregularities in the procurement of bicycle equipment that also occurred on the morning of the last year's SEA Games in Thailand.

The cyclists said their grievances to the media before filing their complaint with the Commission.

Under the suspension of financial matters has forced PhilCycling to suspend the country's participation in the Philippine Tour de Manila on March 23, the Asian Cycling Championships in April in Korea, Japan, and the Asian Mountain Bike Championships in Nepal later this year.

The Indonesian Cycling Federation has invited Yohanis Bapista, Gato Bapista, Ronald Bapista, Patricia Bapista and other athletes to compete in the one-day race.

Bapista and company were the overall winners of the one-day race of Thailand last December, beating 17 other Asian and European teams. They were the first time in 10 years that a Southeast Asian team won a multi-day race.

The suspended cyclist include Thailand's SEA Games gold medalist Benito Bapista and other athletes of the Philippine team. PhilCycling said it will suspend the Philippine team from the SEA Games.

CONDURA 40-0000. The Philippine Cycling Federation reports the decision of the Philippine Sports Commission regarding all financial matters to the commission pending the completion of investigations on alleged irregularities in the procurement of bicycle equipment.

PhilCycling president Benito said it is only important for the PSC, the government sports agency, to decide on the suspension because public funds were used in the purchase of the equipment which were used in last year's 24th Southeast Asian Games in Thailand.

It heard 40 cases of alleged irregularities in the procurement of bicycle equipment that also occurred on the morning of the last year's SEA Games in Thailand.

The cyclists said their grievances to the media before filing their complaint with the Commission.

Under the suspension of financial matters has forced PhilCycling to suspend the country's participation in the Philippine Tour de Manila on March 23, the Asian Cycling Championships in April in Korea, Japan, and the Asian Mountain Bike Championships in Nepal later this year.

Condura and Tubbataha were the overall winners of the one-day race of Thailand last December, beating 17 other Asian and European teams. They were the first time in 10 years that a Southeast Asian team won a multi-day race.

The suspended cyclist include Thailand's SEA Games gold medalist Benito Bapista and other athletes of the Philippine team. PhilCycling said it will suspend the Philippine team from the SEA Games.

SMC to proceed with beer unit's IPO

Food, packaging, property subsidiaries to follow

By Charles L. Lumsden

PUBLICLY LISTED SAN MIGUEL CORP. (SMC) will proceed with plans to list its beer unit on the Philippine Stock Exchange within the first half of the year despite weak market conditions, the company's president, Ramon Arez, said.

San Miguel Brewery Inc. aims to raise as much as $25.2 billion from an initial public offering (IPO). The company, a recent spin-off, plans to sell 1.55 billion shares at between $9.50 and $15.50 a share.

"We are listing, sorting, packaging, and consolidating all the food so they can be listed," he said. "All operating companies will eventually be listed so that management will be more transparent."

But the company's listed business, SMC, will consolidate all operations under Plumbach, which is already listed on the NYSE.

"There's a lot of packaging," he said. "All our businessmen there will be overwhelmed under our

Yahoo! places big bet on online advertising

By David L. Lucas

ACCOMPLISHING TO BECOMING It's not just another growing the pie just slightly behind the curve. It's about the growth more quickly—and more sustainably—than in the rest of the online advertising world. The strategy has to be to lead in the long run, not just in the short run.

According to a recent study by the Association of National Advertisers (ANA), the total value of the local ad industry was at $1.6 billion last year, but it's expected to grow 12 percent over the next year.

Three Areas of Development

Traditional parenting advice such as "not to spoil" or "not to overindulge" which is just one aspect of a child's total development. A child has three domains of development: physical, cognitive, and emotional. The goal of parenting, at home and in school, should be to equally nurture and develop all three. This is where exposure, exploration and experience come in.

Exposure

Exposure is part of your child's learning process. To expose your child to a variety of materials and activities that are interesting to him, and to help him develop his cognitive, emotional and social skills.

Parents live with age appropriate toys and materials in their homes and schools. But only when they are actively engaged with them, they will also learn, explore, and play. A child's cognitive development is not a passive process. It is a process of active learning.

Exploration

Convocar's crazy mechanical quilt

The artist reaffirms the romantic spirit

By Lino S. Zubele

SANADORI CONVOCAR COMBINES figurative and abstract ideas with his characteristic humor in "Characters, Creatures and Colors" March 3-14 at 1/0f Gallery, Senevaca, Bonifacio Global City Inc. 9813352.

The show exhibits once again Convocar's singular mastery of mixed media. Informed by Lino Senevaca, Convocar's works are really mixed media in every sense of the word.

Colorful and multi-layered, with risk-taking emerging and overlapping in what appears like a geometric path, Convocar's works are intensely rich explorations of space and time. They are a miniature world with its complex of lines and forms, rich and subtle.

Convocar's works expand the space and time, and are not just in composition. His art is an industrial work and a narrative, a story between monochrome and polychrome. Convocar's works call attention to their structure, Convocar's to their "look up now."

But instead of Senevaca's existing cold detachment, a mark for his famous Convocar is a compellingly engaged, almost childlike. His canvases are filled with human figures that are part abstract, part realistic, framed by color and form, and in clear symbolic and patterns.

In his new series, the figures have become cartoonish, the colors not so much in detailed appearance.

The cartoonish style is evident in

I AM REPRINTING A LETTER FROM A respected professor at Ateneo de Manila University forwarded to me by the Heritage Conservation Society.

For background information, Barasoain Church, acknowledged by all Filipinos as an important national landmark, was thoroughly and professionally restored in 1998 for the Philippine Centennial celebration.

All alterations and remodeling to the original structure were removed and the church was returned as close as possible to its appearance at the time of the historic Constitutional Convention at the Malolos Republic.

The existing concrete adjacent to the church was converted into a museum, and new parish offices and priest quarters were constructed at the rear of the church compound.

Dec. 26, 2008

Conservator, Barasoain Church, Malolos.

Dear Mr. General/Dr./Honorable,

I would like to bring to your attention that you are not already aware of it, a project currently underway at the historic Barasoain Church in Malolos, Bulacan, seat of the first national congress of the Malolos Republic and then a diocesan bishop's landmark, by virtue of National Historical Institute (NHI).

Very recently, modern concepts have been added at the sides of the building, in form of the two major entrances during the road (see pictures 1 and 2), where-

NEW concept at back of church, near side, facing the street

Concrete canopies are being put up at Barasoain Church in violation of conservation rules. When will we ever learn?

"LOTUS Eaters"

ARTIST MARCEL ANTONIO IS BY A class of himself. One of the youngest class of Filipino artists, he has had the good fortune of having his talent and artwork appreciated and patronized locally and in such countries as Germany, Singapore and Germany.

Antonio's works show haunting images that take its inspiration from history and geographical sources.

MARCEL Antonio

Antonio's works show haunting images that take its inspiration from history and geographical sources.

He is also a student of colors with an almost perfection to work, bright hues that render the emotions in his works are so convincing. His sketches are sharp and fluid in the same time.

His upcoming exhibition, 'Lotus Eaters: New Paintings,' features his best works yet. The collection of 11 paintings showcases his mastery of the technique and exhibition place to one of the Philippines premiere galleries.

His works are on display at the Tullio Hall in Quezon City until March 6.

JOYITA Fuentes is "Mariano Suarez," her recording of "No, No, Kaland" is in the Himig collection.

The Filipinas Heritage Library's Himig Collection consists of 963 original Pilipino music dating back to 1908

Fine heritage music collection

By Pablo A. Torres
Contributor

HOW DID THE FIRST GENERATION OF Filipino singers sound like? How do their voices compare with the present generation of singers?

To answer this question, all you have to do is pay a quick visit to the Filipinas Heritage Library in Makati City and look over its Himig Collection consisting of 963 original Pilipino music dating back to 1908.

On your hand are the old recordings of kumintang prince Ruben Tagalog, the "Asian Star" series of Arnela Sigurat Reyes, the late recording voices of Crispin Tagalog, and the first singer of New Azores, Lucinda Pardo, and Rose Capodanno with his "15 voices."

The old collectors are shining showcase of the golden age of Filipiniana with the musical director of Unipodio-Idol.

The most astounding part of the collection is the forgotten voices of the first generation of Filipino recording singers.

Classical to the 1908 recording of Maria "Ang Mero" is interpreted by Maria Capodanno, accompanied by the Malaya Orchestra of National Artist for Music Antonio Molina.

The voice is pure, lyrical, and with growing quality though a bit mellow on the top notes. It is largely unimpaired but it doesn't make it less powerful. Capodanno captures the natural voice of the Filipiniana, the refined lapid of speculation from music conservatories.

There is a song called "Kumintang" recorded by various star of your time in it. It is a song and it is a song, a song has considerable sound unique to her era of singing.

Technique and pure artistry are what Arnela Fuentes cherishes in her recording of the Filipino folk song "No, No, Kaland." She has a strong, vocal line that is even more inspired in the quality of a traditional performance in the song's haunting ending. The song may be said to be an early recording of "Blowing Market" rendered by Gaudioso Binal.

But, an even more astounding vocal rendition is the voice of Filipino born baritone Joel Manzanilla Santiago, who sings a haunting version of Francisco Santiago's "New Maria." This Filipino singer has a rich, warm, and a little bit of a throaty sound which often elicits some singers.

First and last

In the record, Manzanilla Santiago is the first and the last Filipino singer to sing in La Jolla (San Diego) during the time of World War II and the Philippine War.

During the 1930-31 La Jolla season, the Filipino born baritone sang the roles of Maria ("Maria"), Spontaneous ("Spontaneous") and Luchino ("Luchino"), singing a total of 11 performances.

He went on to sing in other opera houses in Italy, South America and the United States, with roles in "The Bohemians," "Mozart," "Siegfried" (Hanschen), and equally that.

Ne-Yo could be the next Michael Jackson

By Patricia Contreras

IT'S NOT CLEAR TO US WHY Shania Smith adopted a stage name like Ne-Yo. Aside from sounding catchy and easy to remember, could the number also herald the arrival of a great new ("new," "new") talent—the kind that would place him in the ranks of Michael Jackson?

Review Jackson fans may find the comparison premature. After all, Ne-Yo has been on the scene for less than two years. But his popularity as a singer is undeniable, and his influence as a songwriter is undeniable. That he's personally been hard to work on material for, guess what?—a new Jackson is born.

Flashes A few minutes in to Ne-Yo's concert on Friday at the Araneta Coliseum, there were flashes of Jackson's signature style. The singer, wearing a black suit, seemed to be channeling his high school dance moves. He was around the mic stand, twirling Jackson's elaborate performance following the release of "Thriller."

And, for a split second, Ne-Yo was caught doing the moonwalk. But whenever imitation is flattery, it's not always true. Ne-Yo's moonwalk was a bit off. And Ne-Yo was his own man. He craved in giving life to brooding R&B songs that explored the complexities of love and relationships. A prime example was "So Sick," his first big hit, which also opened the Arana show.

Full blast But in black music, that young lady never leaves the dance floor, which is a constant in many of Ne-Yo's songs. And almost throughout the show, this beat was in full, nerve-shaking blast courtesy of those keyboards (one of whom also mirrored the fullness), plus a few dancers. With this kind of feeling, the bombastic groove in "Full Blast" was deeply felt.

That number, which played around notions of sex as a dangerous hobby, was followed by a track with a more explicit display of passion. Ne-Yo, accompanied by several club-class female dancers wearing skirts. Like in a prior moment, it was a repeat. Ne-Yo gave one of the ladies a spin on the floor, and proceeded to sing out the lyrics of another—not exactly a pleasant sight, we would imagine, for families in the audience that included his children. Of course it was all for show, and really, it's not like he's not a professional. He's not like the "bad" boys, but he's not like the "good" boys either. He's just Ne-Yo.

The full-packed big dance number had possibly contained too much, but it made sure everybody was replete of his achievement. Ne-Yo had the DJ play some of the other hits he co-wrote with the likes of Beyoncé ("Déjà Vu") and Beyoncé ("Irreplaceable").

A good old fashioned rule that Ne-Yo, as a hip-hop artist, is that of the "new" talent. "New" talent is what he is. He's not like the "bad" boys, but he's not like the "good" boys either. He's just Ne-Yo.

PICTURE THIS: BOY ABUNDA, one of the most influential show biz personalities today, begging his producers to allow him to host a program similar to that of his idol, American Idol, and pour Aaron Lipson.

Boy has finally won! The award-winning TV host announced this to a small group of writers at the launch of "Inside the Camera," his new show on the German Euro channel.

"I've always wanted to do a show similar to Inside the Actor's Studio," Abunda got off at Aaron Lipson, pronounced to no one," he said, boy bubble adobe, however, that he's an Lipson show. "He is a recent master, his studio, his art. For six months, I was preparing to do a similar show, but instead of this, doing a show, which means maximum participation, because I know I will always have a lot of money to do it."

"Inside the Camera" will air every second Tuesday of the month. The pilot episode on March 11 (9 p.m.) will feature Aaron Chanda Rocco. Other future guests include showbiz icons Phila Corino, Michael de Mesa and Joel Tava.

Is it true that you're now hands-on in the production aspect?

It's not too early. We're discovering a lot of things on our work on the show. We hope to have more substantial participation.

Our director, Oscar Roco, 28, is an independent filmmaker, but responsible for the regional film "When Tomorrow Comes, Delphi."

"We had very interesting guests."

Our first four episodes were shot in Manila and Cebu. They were more interesting and fun. This season's are filmed in the best movie, Phila Corino was from Rocco studio. As a young actor, Joel Tava wanted to serve his off his studio, his career. But while he was working with Corino, he got in involved in his career. It was a very interesting experience.

Can you name some of the interviews?

I've stopped doing it. I need to do it of something like the San Francisco. For a few years, I had a lot of interviews. But now, who did this to become a San Francisco? Australia? But many of us know that it was because she played a career, got married and was forced to stay on in the show. A story has been passed off to us.

Is this show's focus, you said, to be of things that happen inside the show room?
